By Tajudeen Babamale

As the University of Ilorin concludes its 2022/2023 academic session, the Vice Chancellor, Prof. Wahab Olasupo Egbewole, SAN, has appreciated all staff members for their dedication and belief in the institution's goals, objectives, and vision.

Prof. Egbewole made these remarks last Thursday (September 26, 2024) while speaking during the end-of-session luncheon held at the University Multipurpose Hall.

The Vice Chancellor observed that the University confronted some obstacles during the just concluded session, such as electricity issue, the impact of fuel subsidy removal, and spiraling inflation, saying, "Despite everything, we pulled through".

The Unilorin Chief Executive Officer commended the resilience and dedication of members of the University community, noting that, in the face of these challenges, they remained focused on the institution's core goals.

According to him, "While we were challenged, we remain resilient, committed, focused on the goals on which our University is set up. We continued to do our researches; we continued to teach our students and we continued to undertake community services. It is my hope that we will navigate these challenges and arrive safely."

Prof. Egbewole also used the occasion to call on the University staff to maintain their dedication in the upcoming academic session, noting that while the road ahead may be difficult, the University is prepared and willing to persevere.

In his remarks, the Chairman of the Business Committee of Senate (BCOS), who is also the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Academic), Prof. Olubunmi Abayomi Omotesho, expressed his gratitude to the Vice Chancellor for entrusting him with the role.

Prof. Omotesho noted that the last session was hectic and challenging. He, however, thanked all the teaching and non-teaching staff for their contributions to the successful completion of the session.

He specifically acknowledged the efforts of Level Advisers, Exam Officers, Heads of Departments, and the Committee of Provost and Deans, saying, "Thank you for your patience and for delivering on your responsibilities."

Prof. Omotesho also extended his appreciation to the staff of the Senate, under the leadership of the Deputy Registrar, Senate, Mrs Kafilat Afolayan, for their unwavering support throughout the session.

Also speaking in the same vein, the Registrar and Secretary to the Senate, Mr. Mansur Adeleke Alfanla, commended the staff for their dedication to the service of the University, noting that without their commitment, there would be little to celebrate.

While thanking all members of the Senate, as well as individuals who contributed to the successful execution of the session's activities, Mr Alfanla called for continued dedication from all University personnel to ensure that the new session builds on the achievements of the previous one.

The Registrar said, "As we transition into the 2024/2025 academic session, I urge that all planned activities to make the session a memorable one be diligently implemented at the individual staff level, at the departmental level, and within the faculties."

The veteran labour activist acknowledged the encouraging administrative styles and leadership capacities of the Vice Chancellor, which had been ensuring dialogue, compromise, understanding and peaceful coexistence between the University Administration and workers and between the institution and students as well as with other stakeholders.

Comrade Aremu noted that the steps of the Vice Chancellor would definitely propel the University back to its tradition of unbroken academic calendar, which would stimulate meaningful teaching and learning as well as research and ensure that students of the University continue to graduate as scheduled.

The MINILS Director General assured Prof. Egbewole of the readiness of his Institute, which he described as the nation's premier labour training institution, to partner with the University and particularly its Centre for Peace and Strategic Studies towards promoting industrial harmony and understanding in the University.

The Army Chief, who was represented by the Director of Training, Nigerian Army Headquarters, Major-General Sanni Gambo Mohammed, recalled the several roles played by the Army across the nation's history.

Lt. General Lagbaja explained that the Nigerian Army is one of the institutions that are contributing greatly to national integration, which is not only reflected in the recruitment of its officers and men but also in the discharge of its duties such that there is no room for division.

He recalled that without the sacrifices of the officers and men of the Nigerian Army and other arms of the military, the history of the country would have been remarkably different.

Lt. General Lagbaja, who noted that the intervention of the Army in the nation's politics notwithstanding, the institution has done very well towards keeping the nation indivisible united and building infrastructures.

The Army chief also acknowledged the contributions of the Nigerian Army to the promotion of global peace and harmony through its participation in peacekeeping operations across the world. By Tajudeen Babamale

The Vice Chancellor of the University of Ilorin, Prof. Wahab Olasupo Egbewole, SAN, has commended the Association of Pediatric Surgeons of Nigeria (APSON) on the success of its free medical outreach, in which 168 indigent children from Nigeria, Benin Republic, and Chad benefitted.

Prof. Egbewole gave the commendation last Wednesday (September 25, 2024) when he received the national executives of APSON, who paid him a courtesy visit ahead of their 23rd Scientific Conference and Annual General Meeting, held in Ilorin.

The Vice Chancellor acknowledged and applauded the efforts of the Association in alleviating the financial burden on the families of the children that benefitted from the surgeries.

While noting that pediatric care is significant to the future of any society, the Professor of Jurisprudence and International Law explained that the survival and well-being of children are critical for national development and appreciated the surgeons for their life-saving interventions.

Prof. Egbewole also expressed confidence in the continued partnership between the University of Ilorin and APSON, as he expressed hope that the outcomes of the conference would lead to positive societal impact.

■ The Vice Chancellor, Prof. Egbewole (middle), with members of the APSON executives during the visit

Earlier in his remarks, the President of APSON, Prof. Roland Iheanyichukwu Osuoji, thanked the University management for its support during the free surgical outreach. He especially credited the University of Ilorin for creating an enabling environment for the outreach, particularly through the support of the Clinical Simulation Centre, situated in the Faculty of Clinical Sciences, which was vital to the success of the surgeries.

Prof. Osuoji said APSON, which was established in 2001, has made remarkable strides in providing essential medical services to children across Nigeria and noted the significant impact it has had on children's lives.

Prof. Osuoji said that 188 surgical procedures were performed for 168 children at no cost to the benefitting during the outreach, which would have otherwise amounted to between ₦25 million to ₦42 million, adding that specialists, including surgeons and physicians from Canada, were involved in trauma resuscitation training for children during the outreach.

He acknowledged the promotion of several APSON members to the professorial cadre by the authorities of the University of Ilorin, describing it as a way to motivate staff to contribute further to the system.

IEDPU applauds UNILORIN's contributions to host community

By Abubakar Imam

The University of Ilorin has again been commended for its constant engagement and positive interactions with relevant stakeholders as well as contributions to the all-round development of its host community.

The National President of the Ilorin Emirate Descendants Progressive Union (IEDPU), Alhaji Abdulmumini Ayo Abdulmalik, gave this commendation last Tuesday (September 24, 2024) while featuring on 'Oro to nlo', a popular Yoruba current affairs programme of UNILORIN 89.3 FM. The programme was anchored by the Head of the Station, Mr Idris Akintola Ibrahim (Alooma).

The community leader said that successive administrations of the University over the years have always been considerate towards the interests of its host community.

He cited the establishment of the Centre for Ilorin Studies (CILS) and the School of Preliminary Studies, Fufu; as well as the radio station, among others, as some of the decisions taken by the University to facilitate the development of the Ilorin Emirate.

Alhaji Abdulmalik, who recalled the roles played by leaders and members of the Ilorin community in the establishment of the University in 1975, said that the people of Ilorin are always at peace with the University.

The IEDPU President, who is a retired Assistant Comptroller-General of the Nigeria Immigration Service, said that the foresight of the people of Ilorin Emirate made them release a large expanse of land for the University, which makes it one of the largest universities in Nigeria.

He added that the location of the University in Ilorin has been a source of remarkable blessings for the people of the community, saying that the city has not remained the same since its establishment.

Speaking on the upcoming celebration of the University's golden jubilee, Alhaji Abdulmalik said that the event deserves to be celebrated by all and sundry as he said that 50 years in the annals of a university is not a joke.

The community leader assured the University management that the community would key-in to the celebrations, adding that the University has given the community every reason to always collaborate with it.

He recalled that hundreds of indigenes of the community, who are contributing to the development of the community in one way or the other, graduated from the University.

He added that it is also remarkable that two of the past Vice Chancellors are indigenes of the community as he said that Ilorin Emirate has equally produced two Registrars of the University and a former Pro-Chancellor and Chairman of its Governing Council as well as many Deputy Vice Chancellors and Deans of Faculties, among others, at one time or the other.
